Grapevine is celebrating

70 years

Guilt is really the reverse side of the coin of pride. Guilt aims at self destruction and pride aims at the destruction of others. This is why I see humility for today as that safe and secure stance midway between these violent emotional extremes. To take my next small step up the clearly marked road that points to eternal values.

You may drop off your Grapevines at the Central Service Office. In the Fellowship Room. They will be picked up by members carrying the message into Treatment Facilities.

Thank you for your participation.

Tradition Six (long form)

Problems of money, property, and authority may easily divert us from our primary spiritual aim. We think, therefore, that any considerable property of genuine use to AA should be separately incorporated and managed, thus dividing the material from the spiritual. An AA group, as such, should never go into business. Secondary aids to AA, such as clubs or hospitals which require much property or administration, ought to be incorporated and so set apart that, if necessary, they can be freely discarded by the groups. Hence such facilities ought not to use the AA name. Their management should be the sole responsibility of those people who financially support them. For clubs, AA managers are usually preferred. But hospitals, as well as other places of recuperation, ought to be well outside AA-and medically supervised. While an AA group may cooperate with anyone, such cooperation ought never go so far as affiliation or endorsement, actual or implied. An AA group can bind itself to no one. freely discarded by the groups. Hence such facilities ought not to use the AA name. What About The AA Group

The AA Group

The purpose of all AA groups, as stated in our Preamble, is for members to "share their experience, strength and hope with each other, that they may solve their common problem and help others to recover from alcoholism." Most AA meetings are considered voting groups when they follow the long form of our Third Tradition.

Why is a meeting not a Group?

Perhaps the most important distinction between groups and meetings is singleness of purpose: to stay sober and help others recover from alcoholism. Unlike most meetings, AA groups continue to exist outside prescribed meeting hours, always ready to provide Twelfth Step help when needed. A Group has a vote in the decision making process of AA as a whole.

The Home Group - One Group, One Vote

Although AA members attend the meetings of many groups, and feel comfortable in these meetings, the Home Group remains the strongest bond between the individual AA member and the Fellowship. With membership comes the right to vote upon issues that might affect the Group and might also affect AA as a whole—a process that forms the very cornerstone of AA's service structure. As with all Group conscience matters, each AA member has one vote; and this, ideally, is voiced through the Home Group.

The Spirit of Rotation

Traditionally, rotation of service positions keeps AA members from becoming frozen in office. It also ensures that group tasks, like nearly everything else in AA, are passed around for all to share. Rotation insures that fresh ideas are brought to the task, and helps to bring us spiritual rewards more enduring than fame. And, in the spirit of Tradition Twelve, it ever reminds us "to place principles before personalities." Terms are usually two years, but can be any length the Group designates. Before you rotate out of any AA office, be sure to help train your replacement.

What is an informed group conscience?

The group conscience is the collective conscience of the Group membership and thus represents substantial unanimity on an issue before definitive action is taken. This is achieved by the group members through the sharing of full information, individual points of view, and the practice of AA principles. To be fully informed requires a willingness to listen to minority points of view with an open mind. On sensitive issues, the group works slowly - discouraging formal motions until a clear sense of its collective view emerges. Placing principles before personalities, the membership is wary of dominant opinions. Its voice is heard when a well informed group arrives at a decision. The results rests on more than a yes or no count—precisely because it is the spiritual expression of the group conscience. The term informed group conscience implies that pertinent information has been studied and views are heard before the group votes.

Reprint from The AA Grapevine, Inc.,

Spellbound By AA: An Interview With Nell Wing

Nine years after the Fellowship of Alcoholics Anonymous begun in Akron, Ohio, the Grapevine magazine published its first issue in June 1944. Three years after that Nell Wing arrived in New York. A young woman in her late twenties, Nell had decided to go to Mexico to pursue a career in sculpture. In the meantime, she wanted a temporary job to earn a little more money for the journey. The agency where she applied for a temporary job told her about an opening at the headquarters office of Alcoholics Anonymous. Nell knew about AA, having read Morris Markey's article "Alcoholics and God" in the September 1939 Liberty magazine, and through other magazine articles in the early forties, as well.

In 1947, she started working in the office of the Alcoholic Foundation (now the General Service Office), and in 1950 became Bill W.'s secretary. Within a few years, she became close friends with Bill and his wife, Lois, and on weekends she regularly went up to Stepping Stones, their home in Bedford Hills, N.Y., to help Bill with correspondence or research, or just to keep him and Lois company.

After Bill died in 1971, Nell continued her close association with the General Service Office and with Lois. She organized the AA Archives, and last year published a memoir called Grateful to Have Been There. Nell never got to Mexico, but she worked for AA for thirty-six years. She still travels frequently around the country, speaking to groups about AA history.

As a bonus to Grapevine readers for this special 50th anniversary issue, two Grapevine staff members--the managing editor and an assistant--interviewed Nell Wing at the Grapevine office in New York and talked about the magazine, Bill W., the early days of AA, and a variety of other things.

You've described the Grapevine as having an "improbable history." What did you mean?

It's miraculous that the Grapevine is still in existence fifty years later. The Grapevine doesn't have what a lot of magazines have--like ads or a sales force. It has to stick to its primary purpose and basically that's to ask members to write articles, to share their stories, to feature events happening in their areas, now or in the future. But the Grapevine has kept going because there are many, many people who understand and appreciate it. There are always enough members who find it useful and helpful in maintaining sobriety and keep it going. Some even read it long before becoming members of AA.

What was it about the Grapevine that Bill W. found so appealing?

He quickly saw it as a means of carrying the message. And since he couldn't connect personally with all groups and areas of AA on a regular basis, he used it as a primary source of sharing and explaining the important issues that he wanted accepted by the Fellowship. Now, it took several years, as we know, before there was a steady and enthusiastic growth of Grapevine readers. But Bill thought that sharing his ideas in print this way was important. It was there--you could read it, you could think about it, you could refer to it later.

That was one of the reasons for writing the Big Book--so the program wouldn't get "garbled" in transmission.

Exactly. If it's in print, it's a matter of record. And the fact is, Bill was perhaps his own worst enemy in trying to get his ideas across. He could pound you into a corner, so to speak, because of his frustration when his ideas were not understood and accepted by the trustees and the membership at large. So the Grapevine was an effective way for him to reach people--without the pounding!

The Grapevine is now fifty years old, and we're considering what our role for the future will be. Do you have any thoughts about where the Grapevine fits in?

Preserving the experience--to my mind that's what you do in the Grapevine. The Grapevine's purpose is similar to the purpose of archives in general: to preserve the past, understand the present, and discuss and predict the future. So many young people are coming in today and they need to know about the history of AA.

Financials are given at the monthly CSOR Meeting on the 3rd Monday of the month. We encourage our Groups to send a representative from their Group to hear the financials read, to hear what is happening across the city, and ask questions. It is nice to have CSOR's that come each month on a regular basis to support the operations of the office and The Bookstore. Currently there are about 22 Groups participating monthly. This is good. However, your group can send a representative without their being a CSOR. The representative can sit in on meetings and does not have to come each month.
